What would you give up for the right person?

Two people, thoroughly different, find themselves unavoidably gravitating toward each other. The circumstances that have led to their meeting, however, soon threaten to separate them for all time.

Jasmine Paulson is a biology teacher, tired and disillusioned by the life her small town had to offer to a person with her smarts and needs. Most of her days are spent working and dreaming of an escape; something that always comes at a cost.

James Ackerman, if that is even his real name, is an impossibly attractive and charming stranger from beyond our world, tasked with the duty of finding a way to save his great race from extinction. For weeks he has roamed the American countryside, searching for more than even he is aware of. But when the mission requires both of them to permanently bury their own happiness, will they keel over and let it proceed? Or will they choose their own side?
